"When dealing with the various tribal groups I have already referred to what it was that drove the particularly enterprising out on [72] trading journeys, and what articles of barter could be offered for those one lacked. The whole of the region we have just described had a great and valuable source of wealth in the occurrence of pure copper, both in Bathurst Inlet and some places on Victoria Land, especially on Prince Albert Sound. Of this copper the natives made knives, ulos, ice-picks and harpoon heads, which were highly prized by tribes further away. Diamond Jenness has justly included all these people under the name of The Copper Eskimos."
